LexCase joins the Legus International network

To reinforce its international ambition, LexCase has joined Legus International, a global worldwide network of law firms.

Legus International

Legus International has been created in 1995 to help independent law firms compete more effectively worldwide and has built a strong position in the international legal business.

The network aims at helping their international members to serve their clients effectively by collaborating with partners of excellence around the world. Legus International also goes beyond a traditional network by providing its members with relevant business management strategies and timely education programs.

In 2022, the network includes 1,500 lawyers in nearly 70 countries, with a worldwide range of business law fields. It is ranked as "Leading Law Firm Network" in Chambers and Partners.

Diane BANDON-TOURRET, Head of the International Desk, said: "Joining Legus International is great news for LexCase international influence and completes the International Desk's efforts to offer our clients an international network based on excellence."
